10/3/2025 18:00	Regarding the connection part, here's what I'm thinking is the cause of that and you're also correct that we are in an industry where people are generally familiar with everyone else: When I was at Arizona, Blueprint operated the collective that supported the football program. So the timelines overlap there. What isn't understood is that I had very little to do with the football collective as I was building out the NIL program for men's basketball. There was some tension between those programs and one solution would not have worked for both. So my time was with men's basketball and Blueprint was with Football. I'm sure there were times where we were in meetings together from an administrative perspective, I can't recall more than one offhand, but there would've been very few. I also have not been in contact with anyone from Blueprint for years until this situation presented itself. That being said, I'm not sure what the negative is to explore an opportunity with someone that you had some familiarity with. Seemingly happens all the time across most industries.	Sent		Message
10/3/2025 16:08	There's a lot of smoke out there with your connections w people at Blueprint. Understandably, this is the industry. People know each other. Is there anything you can or want to say to quiet that stuff? I don't believe 95 percent of things I see on social media.	Received		Message

6/24/2025 1:51	It would also be appreciated if Blueprint added more to what it was originally providing DNC to help cover that gap. It shouldn't be all on OSU Athletics to make up this margin to get the job done.	Sent	[REDACTED]	iMessage

6/19/2025 1:12	Ok. Scott and I are here to help with facilitating a deal getting done with Blueprint that works for you. 100% respect that it is your company and fully your decision but he and I have discussed the significant concerns about the negative impact to all parties involved if there are multiple entities in the market. We are open to hearing what we can provide to get both sides back in agreement. Feel free to call if that's easier as a conversation.	Sent	[REDACTED]	iMessage

6/17/2025 19:44	I understand this is your business as well and your negotiation. So not here to spend your money, but there's some value for all involved on this not happening. And he clearly has a legitimate threat.  That being said, if Kyle gets a little bit more out of the deal with Blueprint so that he feels better about all this, then so be it. We could potentially find some workarounds in our partnership with you to help you recoup.	Sent	[REDACTED]	iMessage
6/17/2025 19:43	Rob, Brent and I can manage moving forward.  Brent, are you able to connect this afternoon or tomorrow?	Received	[REDACTED]	iMessage

6/17/2025 19:41	What Kyle has told me is below. I'm not saying whether this is fake or fiction, just relaying what I've been told. After a significant period of radio silence from Blueprint, Kyle and his attorney became concerned that a deal was actually going to get done. They were then contacted by another company to take over the collective. Given the concern they had about an agreement and the nonresponsiveness from Blueprint, they decided to engage in that conversation. The other company is giving them a significantly higher guarantee for the company, as you can see. Both Scott and I have shared with Kyle our concerns about him creating confusion in the market if he goes somewhere else. Him signing with them will not change our deal with Blueprint. In the end, it is Kyle's business and his prerogative to do whatever he wants to do. He claims to want to do whatever is best for Oregon State and the student athletes, I'm not sure he's understanding the problems this will cause.	Sent	[REDACTED]	iMessage
6/17/2025 19:28	Brent, I added Gerry to this text. We received this from Rance the lawyer for Kyle.
